X Marks The Political Spot

There has been the usual promise of the greatest presidential campaign in history, but it doesn't mean much unless something is going to be substantially different.

If campaign technique never changed at all. population growth alone would make each presidential campaign the "greatest" in history. But in 1932 and before that in 1928, radio gave politics a voice in American living rooms. In the 19th century, the railroad train furnished a new plus-factor.

In 1952, aviation put wings on politicians and made it possible for them to fly where they wanted to be in a few hours. In 1948, television gave them an image to present in a fireside environment. But these things are commonplace now

What's new'

There will be planes in 1960, but there also will be trains. Radio and television will be used more than before. But these are not

The new thing seems likely to be emphasis on something so old that newcomers are unfamiliar with it-something as old as Tammany Hall. It is the political machine set up, geared and operated to get out every possible vote

THE DEMOCRATIC party, thanks to its close alliance with labor unions, has been doing a good job on this; unions are made to order for the intensive work needed to can-

The Republican party has had a serious weakness in this regard. Not only has it been less than efficient in lining up voters potentially favorable to its candidates. It has been less than efficient in lining up all voters known to be favorable to its candidates. It has not even registered them.

Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona pointed out to his fellow Republicans in Chicago that many Republicans who share his conservative views have been sulking in their tents, mindless of the fact their only chance is to keep the Republican party going, because Democrats have veered so far toward socialism conservatives can find no refuge ORGANIZATION at the precinct level is likely to be the new thing in the 1960 campaign. It will not be speeches, which are useful only for firing up the enthusiasm of party workers. It will be the drab work of getting voters to use ballots.

The Kennedy technique in this respect was unusually effective in the 1960 primaries. It will be stressed even harder in the election. The Nixon technique is unproved, but Re publican National Chairman Thruston Morton has been telling everybody who would listen that he considers this kind of chore work to be the foundation of politics

Speeches, debates, stimulation, high principles and the sometimes low trappings of the political art don't win elections. Only one thing in politics matters-a voter marking an X on a ballot-preferably in the place where it will do the most good for the party that jarred him out of his apathy.

Without X's on the right spots, everything else that goes on in the name of politics

Throw Away The Whistle

We can't recall a campaign in which both sides were crying "Foul!" so early. Even before Sen. Kennedy finished that acceptance speech which prompted the cry of "Foul!" Democrats who hate Mr. Nixon because he can dish it out on a par with Harry Truman had been yelling protests against him.

We don't deny that fouls are committed in politics. But the trouble is that politics has no referee. Attempts to get politicians to agree to codes of fair play have been futile. Fair play isn't the nature of the polit-

THIS LEAVES everything up to the spectators, who must decide for themselves when fouls are being committed. This always has been part of political campaigning in America-this right of the spectators to decide who is doing the dirty playing and whether penalties will be called for at the polls.

It is never the right of the contestants to blow whistles on each other, although they do it all the time in the hope of branding the other side with a reputation for dirty

Many Americans have been told so many times by so many Democrats that Richard Nixon goes for the jugular that they ignore the fact the most unscrupulous campaign in recent history was waged by President Truman in 1948, when he told farmers in the Midwest to pay off their debt to him for the grain storage bins they had been given by the whole country.

When Mr. Truman went for the jugular, they called it "giving 'em hell."

When anybody else does it, the worst it can be called is gloves-off campaigning. There's going to be a lot of it in 1960.

BEFORE IT GOES any further, every voter should make up his mind how to cope with it as it comes along. It wouldn't be a bad idea for a beginning to decide never to take it seriously when one side charges the other with committing a foul

Both sides will be going for every advantage they can squeeze out of the campaign. As long as there's no official referee -only the public, which is as partisan as the contenders-there is no way to call a

Politics is a game unto itself, unlike basketball, in which just about everything is a foul; football, in which anything the referee happens to see is a foul, or ice hockey, in which frontal assault with a lethal weapon is officially discouraged.

A Proper Move

Though its very name leaves no doubt as to its objective, the Nonpartisan Committee Against The Wage Tax is taking a more sensible approach to the issue before setting up any definite campaign

It has decided to contact Council in an effort to learn how the proposed funds will be earmarked. This is a logical step. To actively oppose an issue without a definite understanding as to what it would or would not offer would be like putting the cart before . the horse.

With the final legality of some petition names still being determined today, it would seem foolish for anyone to take a direct stand at this time on the proposed tax, even if firmly convinced of the need for the municipal improvements it could be expected to

How the money from such a levy would be spent is of primary consideration.

It is quite possible that when the proposed expenditures are broken down for presentation to the people many who already have expressed opposition to the tax will have a change of heart on the basis of benefits to be realized from the small individual investment involved.

However, until the facts are presented the level-headed course would be to mark time.

Weapons Are Scattered

WASHINGTON If you notice a sleek bomber parked at your hometown airport, it's a token of the times-part of a sweeping program to disperse the weapons with which to strike back in the event of a sudden attack. A few days ago the Strategic Air Command began sending individual bombers to commercial airports, deploying them temporarily from their regular airdromes to train the crews in this new procedure. This is an extension of SAC's program of building more military airfields to scatter its enemy missiles and planes. The dispersal program is not confined to the Air Force. The Navy (which learned a hard lesson at Pearl Harbor) now keeps a large segment of its fleet either at sea or in widely separated ports.

bombers and reduce concentrated targets for

THE ARMY'S strategic dispersal problem is more difficult. But it has revamped completely its battlefield plans to avoid concentrated targets for atomic fire against troops

While airplanes can be distributed easily to scattered points, land-based missiles present dispersal difficulties. The mixed launching bases for transoceanic rockets, of course. can't be moved about. And their present and planned locations are known at home and

One solution is to "harden" the launchers. put them in holes reinforced to withstand anything short of a direct hit by an enemy the Air Force's Minuteman ICBM missile is ready, two launching techniques will be used. The solid-fuel rocket can be fired from a hardened site or from railroad cars which will move from spot to spot, constantly shift-

The Navy claims it has the best of all

The sea service's argument is that not only does the system of launching ballistic missiles from submarines confound enemy defenses and vastly reduce the danger of destruction of the launching base, but it provides this added feature

If missiles bases aren't located in the United States, the reason for all-out nuclear

THE DANGER of a swift strike by Russia was important when only bombers, which need long hours to make intercontinental flight, posed the major menace. Today the enemy's arsenal has missiles designed to reach targets in half an hour.

The nation's master plan for meeting massive attack goes beyond disposal of weapons. The government has its own dispersal program, including movement of key per-

There also is the "continuity of government" program, establishing the line of succession in event of death of top officials. This has military significance. By law, the president is the only official who could order use

A Headlong Rush Into Independence

By Saul Pett

In the history of men and nations, Africa slept late, very late. It awakened only yesterday with the sun high in the sky. Like most people who oversleep, it got up with a jolt and rushed out of bed with a frantic need to catch up with whatever it missed. It is rushing into the world and the 20th Century only half-dressed.

Africa capsulizes the bookshelves of history into one hurried paragraph and defies the law of evolution for nations. Africa has no time for evolution or natural

New nations are being born overnight, with all the dangers of forced delivery to both mother and child, and it still is too early to tell whether the offspring will be weak, half-formed or deform-

THERE IS NO parallel in history to match the awakening of this huge continent of 250,000,000 people, to whom the wheel was a novelty only yesterday and freedom is a novelty today We might have had something like it if Europe, by speeding up the film of time to a crazy comic page, had moved in a single generation from the ancient wandering Gauls to DeGaulle, from the Celts to Macmillan, with no Voltaire or Magna Carta in between.

We might have had something like it in North America, if George Washington and Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson had been the sons of illiterate Indians, if only a generation had separated 1492 from 1776 and 1776 from 1960

The paradox of Africa is that it must leap directly from the stone age to the atomic age! The tragedy of Africa is that it must do this self-consciously in a glass cage, with all the divided world looking over its shoulder.

Each new development is watched carefully by Russia, the United States and India, by the liberals of New York and London, the propogandists of Moscow and Peiping, the racially sensitive neutralists of New Delhi and Jakarta, the white supremacists of Mississippi and Africa itself.

THUS, A western European power might think, for the best, most unselfish reasons, that independence for a given colony in African should be delayed.

But before coming to such a decision, it would have to consider the screams of "imperialistic enslavement" sure to come from Russia and China, the urbane but suspicious questions sure to come from India and other nations lately freed of colonialism themselves

And the screams came on schedule in the Congo. A week after that colony became independent, Belgium rushed troops back in to protect the white population from violence.

Russia promptly cried out that the Belgians with American support were trying to reestablish control of the Congo. The United Nations was called in and immediately East and West chose up

Why the terror and chaos: ials nor the Congolese nationalists.

In many places in Africa, leadership is falling to or being grabbed by small intellectual elite who are usually the first generation in their families and their countries to have been educated. Illiteracy remains staggeringly high and preparation for self-rule, except for this narrow elite, staggeringly low.

World Court Support

By Ernest Vaccaro

Senate Not Expected To Act This Session

will act at its current short sessicn to strengthen U.S. support for the World Court.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon, as well as President Eisenhower, Secretary of State Christian A. Herter and Atty, Gen. William P. Rogers, has advocated repeal of a U.S. veto over the court's jurisdiction.

But the 1960 Republican platform on which Nixon is seeking the presidency avoids mention of the bitter and highly emotional controversy the issue has stirred

Sen. John F. Kennedy, the Democratic presidential standard bearer, supports repeal, and his course is backed by a provision in the Democratic platform.

But Democrats-among whom many Southerners are opposed to giving the court further powerare doubtful they can muster the necessary two-thirds majority to effect a change.

The major dispute is over proposals to repeal what is known as the Connally reservation, sponsored by former Sen. Tom Connally (D-Tex) and adopted by the Senate as a reservation when it ratified U.S. membership in the International Court of Justice created under the United Nations.

The rider says, in effect, that the United States shall be the sole judge of whether an international dispute in which it is involved can be brought before the World Court

The reservation's supporterswho bombard the Senate Foreign Relations committee with letters and telegrams every time the issue comes up-contend the veto is necessary to prevent a surrender to an international court of U.S. sovereignty.

The committee decided, in view of the emotions stirred up by the repealer, to keep it off the floor in an election-year session. The decision was reinforced by doubts it could muster a two-thirds ma-

This in effect would waive the Connally reservation as it applies > to these treaties. The four treaties and the protocol along with them were ratified in one vote May 26. But Sen. Russell B. Long (D-La) and others insisted on a separate vote on the protocol and it was rejected. It got a 49-30 vote of approval, but that was short of the necessary two-thirds.

A motion to reconsider that rejection is pending on the calendar. Also pending is a treaty to prevent pollution of the sea by oil. Under this treaty, too, the United States would waive the application of the Connally reservation insofar as disputes arising under it are concerned. The committee took the position it was an academic question in this case, anyway, since the treaty covered oil pollution on the high seas by ships, and disputes under could not be construed in any way as being within U.S. domestic jurisdiction But Sen. Long said he would insist on making the Connally reservation applicable to both the law of the sea protocol and the oil pollution treaty. In view of the shortness of the session, neither may be brought up. The same issue is involved in a pending treaty of friendship with Pakistan and a "convention of establishment" with France.

Eisenhower's position is that if the world is to move to the settlement of disputes by law, rather than arms, it must accept the World Court's jurisdiction fully, if other nations are to be persuaded

The opposition argues that repeal or waiver of the Connally reservation would allow a World Court to move in on disputes involving the Panama Canal, immigration policy and many other fields of major domestic impor-

Nixon's Philosophy

By Raymond Moley

In the midst of the extremely difficult task of leadership, a political figure—especially a candidate in as diversified a nation as ours-finds it hard to make clear in a word exactly what his basic philosophy is. This is made more confusing when we consider how inadequate are the expressions we use to describe where we stand so far as our preferences in public policies are concerned.

The word "liberal" means many different things to many different people. A word like that becomes transformed over a period of years. Adam Smith was a liberal. So was William Pitt. So was Edmund Burke. So was James Madison. But these men would find that John Kennedy, Hubert Humphrey, and Walter Reuther, who call themselves liberals, stand for the very policies to which early liberalism was bitterly opposed.

It is so with the word "conservative." To Metternich or Bismarck it would have sounded strange to hear Sen. Goldwater say that the essence of conservatism is opposition to centralized government. Bismarck would have found more comfort in the Democratic platform, which favors welfarism under a central government, than in the Republican platform.

THEN THERE ARE specific issues which are glibly called by one name or another. It is liberal or conservative to believe in more internationalism? Or in stronger civil rights legislation? Or in the conservation of natural resources' Wall Street is for internationalism: and also, in spots at least, for a sound dollar. Is it liberal or con-

Richard Nixon has considered these confusing meanings very thoughtfully. In general, he has reected them in defining what he is ideologically. He also rejects such combinations of opposites as were often used by Eisenhower in the earlier years of his administration, such as "liberal conservatism," or "conservative in money matters and liberal in welfare." For welfare costs money, and too much of it means inflation

Nixon, unlike most politicians. learns more from reading than from listening. He actually reads books. Al Smith hated to read. He would say, "Never mind the book, get me the fellow that wrote it and let me talk with him."

Franklin D. Roosevelt in all the time I was close to him never to my knowledge read a book. Woodrow Wilson did read when he was a professor, but after he was in politics there wasn't time.

In a conversation Nixon mentioned a book he had recently read. It is a very big and important book, "The Constitution of Liberty," by F. A. Hayek, an Austrian who once taught in the University of London and is now at the University of Chicago. Nixon mentioned that he agreed in principle with the summing up in Hayek's final chapter.

IN THAT, Hayek rejects both conservatism and liberalism because of the historical changes which have attended both. His philosophy follows the basic principles of Edmund Burke, the younger James Madison, and the great French commentator, Toc-

Essentially, the common ground on which these men stood was opposition to the over-centralization of power in government generally and in a central government in

Hayek's philosophy, he says, is best described in the traditions of Burke, the younger Gladstone, Lord Acton, and Bryce, "for whom liberty rather than equality and den.ocracy was the main goal." Nixon can as a party leader be dogmatic and doctrinaire in enforcing such a philosophy. But his basic inclination is to limit the role of the federal government to certain essentials and to work for more and more local responsibility, always holding the liberty of the

This essential belief is why it has been possible to hold together such divergent Republicans as Rockefeller and Goldwater. To Nixon the problem of statecraft is often made more difficult because the choice is not simply between right and wrong. It may be between two rights. For such choices as are involved in that problem. his reading and his convictions have amply fitted him.

Boy Saves Young Girl Who Topples Into Lake

The quick-thinking and courage of an East Liverpool boy prevented a possible drowning during Sunday's Democratic outing at Arrowhead Lake

When Marilyn Starr, 6,-yearold from 132 Virginia Ave., Midland, toppled into the lake into about 5 feet of water, Jackie Melvin, 9, flattened himself on the pier and grabbed the outstretched hands of the girl after she had gone under once, witnesses said. The boy then held on until more help arrived and the girl was pulled safely from the water. Jackie is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Melvin of St. Clair

More Heating Has Its Place In Expansion

CHICAGO - Nine out of 10 home expansion projects require new or expanded heating.

Modernization experts say that 60 per cent of home owners who have "growing pains" need extra sleeping quarters, frequently a master bedroom with a bathroom. Another 15 per cent want additional play or leisure space and 25 per cent want additional living space for general use.

All of these additions usually call for heating.

How does the cramped home owner find new space and how is the new space heated?

Most favored methods of expanding, say the experts, are finishing off an attic, enclosing a patio, breezeway, or carport, converting a garage, or adding a new room to the house.

The families with a hydronic heating system are usually in a fortunate position because it is relatively simple to expand the heat distributing system to take on the additional space. Hot water heating plants are flexible and most boilers have sufficient reserve capacity to take care of the extra load.

Whether or not the present heating plant will be able to heat one or more additional rooms can be determined only after a careful survey of the system and the house by an experienced heating and piping contractor.

Whether the additional room can be heated with pipe coils or if it would be preferable to heat it with radiators, convectors, or baseboard, depends on the circumstances. The advice of the heating contractor will be valuable on this

Advisory Council Of Farm Bureau Eves Youngsters

LISBON - Ohio farmers consider their boys and girls as the "No. 1 Crop" in which they take the greatest pride, according to Galen Greenisen, president of the Columbiana County Farm Bureau Federation.

The home factors of rural life which build a responsible man from a curious boy are explored in the August Advisory Council guide, now being discussed by some 30,000 farmers belonging to the councils. The guide asks, "In what ways does our community meet or fail to meet the social needs of our children and young people? How can our Advisory Councils help meet this need?'

Youth has always been an important part of the Farm Bureau program, Greenisen said.

These are the persons who will carry on the traditions and profession of farming. Regional oneweek training schools in five areas of Ohio brought in hundreds of young farm people to work and play while learning from legislative exercises, folk dancing, public speaking and many other activities designed to meet the challenges of youthful thinkers.

If anyone would like to discuss this subject further and does not now belong to an advisory council, call the county farm bureau organization director, Greenisen
